

Chester Vermont

Peaceful,
like the country graveyard:
stones placed long ago by loved ones to prove love lives forever.

I can barely read them now.

Still they stand in ragged lines like soldiers who, after the battle they won but lost
so many of their comrades, gaze at the gaps in their ranks no longer believing quite so deeply in the war.

Steve Bloom
July 1998