

Fog . . .

. . . cannot be recognized—
looks to all the world just like any ordinary cloud—unless you find yourself inside of one.

Steve Bloom
September 2004