

Mississippi

In the Swamp
the tupelo and cypress trees grow—some to be hundreds of years old—despite water deep enough to drown other species,

which reminds me of what we, too,
must do to become poets.

Steve Bloom
July 2007