

Sixty-two Words . . .

. . . for sixty-two years. That's ten lines of six words each, plus two in my title. Not very many but I decide: Today it's sufficient, because I have reached an age when I may count how many of the words we've uttered or heard turn out to be broken, find myself more content to sit and ponder all that remains unspoken.

Steve Bloom
September 13, 2008